After 31 long years of teaching English Rachel Bavister has decided to retire. She had worked at the Ministry of Aviation in London, England, English Department at Gallaudet and also at the Washington Post. She is deeply passionate about teaching English and will deeply miss her position at VSDB.

Donna DeVito is retiring after 25 years at VSDB. She worked at the Maryland School for the Deaf for three years as a Middle School Reading teacher. She also worked at the Wisconsin School for the Deaf for one year and at Whitney Young High School in Chicago as an English teacher.

Donna Wait was employed at VSDB-S for the past seven years as English teacher and assistant principal. She embarked on her teaching career at Minnesota School for the Deaf in 1964 before moving to Maryland School for the Deaf where she was a valued member of MSD faculty for 25 years as a teacher and then family services specialist. Then she got a job as elementary principal at the Mississippi School for the Deaf for three years before coming here.

Job Turner Day

It was learned recently that Job Turner, the first deaf teacher at the Virginia School for the Deaf had passed away May 19, 1903, exactly 100 years ago. With the efforts of the Student Cooperative Association and the Museum Committee, a suitable ceremony was performed in honor of his accomplishments at the nearby Thornrose Cemetery. It is quite likely that this will be the beginning of a new tradition.
